

Module 2: Short Stories

Topic 5 Content: Theme Notes

Introduction

Theme

Morals Universal Truths

Introduction

All of the previous elements you have learned about regarding plot and characterization will help to convey the theme. The pieces come together like a puzzle to give you hints about what the lesson or message is intended to be. In this interactivity, click on each folder tab to learn more about the differences between morals and universal truths, which are both types of themes.

All of the previous elements you have learned about regarding plot and characterization will help to convey the theme. The pieces come together like a puzzle to give you hints about what the lesson or message is intended to be. In this interactivity, click on each folder tab to learn more about the differences between morals and universal truths, which are both types of themes.

Module 2: Short Stories

Topic 5 Content: Theme Notes

Morals

Theme

Morals Universal Truths

Morals

A moral is a lesson that the author wants to teach about life. It is usually a lesson about how people should be or act. These are often told through short tales of morality or animal tales that teach a lesson. Most commonly, you may have seen morals stated or strongly implied at the end of a work.

A moral is a lesson that the author wants to teach about life. It is usually a lesson about how people should be or act. These are often told through short tales of morality or animal tales that teach a lesson. Most commonly, you may have seen morals stated or strongly implied at the end of a work.

Module 2: Short Stories

Topic 5 Content: Theme Notes

Universal Truths

Theme

Morals Universal Truths

Universal Truths

A universal truth is not always pleasant. These are truths about life or human nature that are true around the globe. They might point out unpleasant human behaviors. Universal truths are messages that are considered true universally like "love can lead to exploration of one's soul" or "friendship is important to adolescent survival."

A universal truth is not always pleasant. These are truths about life or human nature that are true around the globe. They might point out unpleasant human behaviors. Universal truths are messages that are considered true universally like "love can lead to exploration of one's soul" or "friendship is important to adolescent survival."