Virginia and United States Government

Plagiarism is the uncredited use of someone else's words, works, or ideas -- that means using someone else's work or ideas without giving them credit.

Below are common MLA Works Cited entries that you might use for your own Works Cited pages in giving "credit" to textual documents that you use for sources of information and for other works (such as audio, video, images, artwork, etc.) that you gain permission to use.

Pay attention to the use of italics, punctuation, and the indentation of the subsequent lines in each example below. Sometimes you may not have all the information needed for a Works Cited entry as shown in the examples below because it is unavailable. If that is the case, then skip it in the example. Use all information that you might have and that the example requires.

In the past, URLs were required for Works Cited pages. Since 2009, this is not the case; however, your instructor still may require the inclusion of the URL. If so, make sure to put as the last element of the Works Cited entry in brackets, such as in this example: <http://www.whro.org>.

- Dates are given in this format: Day Month abbreviated year. Example: 4 July 2009.
- Use n.p. if no publisher is given, n.d. if no date is given, and n. pag. for electronic sources with no pages.
- More information regarding MLA Formatting for works cited is provided at Perdue's Online Writing Lab website.
