

Module 11: The End of the Cold War
Topic 4 Content: Your Response to Terrorism

Introduction

Click the NEXT button to learn how the United States reacted to terrorism.

Module 11: The End of the Cold War

Topic 4 Content: Your Response to Terrorism

Survey of Your Beliefs

How would you have reacted to the 9/11 attacks? Answer yes or no to the following questions.

Question	YES	NO
You would have been angry.	YES	NO
You would have felt a sense of unity.	YES	NO
You would have felt a sense of fear.	YES	NO
You would have supported surveillance.	YES	NO
You would have wanted to point blame.	YES	NO

Why did you make these selections?
.....
After the 9/11 terrorist attacks, citizens of the United States began to process the events. Some people chose to create memorials for those who died, have candlelight vigils, or raise money for victims and rescue workers. Most citizens felt a sense of unity, and banned together. Others felt angry, and wanted to point blame. At times this manifested itself in hatred toward groups including people of Muslim or Arabic decent who became targets of attacks.
.....

CONTINUE

Based on what you already know about the effects the September 11 terrorist attacks had on the United States, how would you have reacted in the aftermath? Answer yes or no to the following questions.

Feedback from survey:

Take a moment to think about why you made those selections. Do you think every American citizen felt the same way after September 11? After the 9/11 terrorist attacks, citizens of the United States began to process the events. Some people chose to create memorials for those who died, have candlelight vigils, or raise money for victims and rescue workers. Most citizens felt a sense of unity, and banned together. Others felt angry, and wanted to point blame. At times this manifested itself in hatred toward groups including people of Muslim or Arabic decent who became targets of attacks.